this book explores women s editorial and salon activities in southern europe and provides a comparative view of their practices it argues that women in spain italy portugal and greece used their double role as editors and salonnières to engage with foreign cultures launch the careers of promising young authors and advocate for modernization and social change by examining a neglected body of periodicals edited between 1860 and 1920 this book sets out to explore women s editorial agendas and their interest in creating a connection between salon life and the print press what purpose did this connection serve how did women editors use their periodicals and their salons to create opportunities for cross cultural exchange in what ways did women use their double role as editors and salonnieres to promote modernization and social progress in southern europe by addressing these questions this monograph contributes to the recent expansion of scholarship on nineteenth and twentieth century periodicals and opens new avenues for theoretical reflection on european modernity it also invites scholars and non specialist readers to question the center vs periphery model and to consider southern european counties as cultural hubs in their own right john law is concerned here with the administration of the venetian state in the late 14th and 15th centuries and specifically with its possessions on the mainland of italy these gave venice dangerously exposed and lengthy land frontiers and also included a number of cities whose loyalties were not to be taken for granted verona friuli and the trentino are the focus of several articles while others look at the people and families involved and at venice s relations with its powerful neighbours from milan to hungary the studies demonstrate the substantial nature of venetian involvement with the terraferma well established by the start of the 15th century and examine the impact on the venetian government itself of these mainland dominions
